Brisk Discussion as to What the Finance Committee Is Doing.

Mr. Voorhees Says It's None of Mr. Chandler's Business.

McPherson Back on the Committee and Mr. Mills Relieved.

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.-There was ome talk, including a denial, in the Senate to-day, of the story that mempers of the sub-committee on the Tariff bill were receiving suggestions direct from the President.

Senator Chandler took this occasion to inquire as to the exact membership of the Finance Committee. "A short time ago." he said, "an order was passed by the Senate constituting Senator Mills a bills were prominent in the reports of member of the Committee in place of the Committees in both houses this morn-Senator McPherson. Does this assign-ment continue? Which is acting as a member or are both acting as mem-less of the City of New York at an expense of

This led to a lively discussion, in the course of which Senator Voorbees, Chairman of the Finance Committee, said, responding to Senator Chandler:

"I have no disposition to give the Senator from New Hampshire a short anator from New Hampshire a short answer, but we are doing our work in our way, and it is none of his business. (Laughter.) We are transacting our work to the best of our ability, and if he is not satisfied he may introduce a resolution of inquiry, and then we will investigate. (Laughter.)

At 225, after the discussion had taken a wide range covering the subject of

At 2.25, after the discussion had taken a wide range, covering the subject of the refusal of the Finance Committee to give tariff hearings, several Senators on both sides had taken part, Senator White, of California, took the floor to speak on the Hawalian resolution.

Previously to this change, Senator Mills cutered the chamber and demanded recognition. "I have just learned, said he, that I have been dragged over the floor of the Senate chamber for some time on account of the part I have taken in trying to help my friends on this side to discharge the pledges that they have made to the country. I have no applogy to make for any part that I have made to the country. I have no applogy to make for any part that I have taken in trying to reduce the burdens which our triends on the other side have rolled up on the shoulders of the people, and which they have been increasing from year to year for the past thirty years."

"I do not feel that it is the duty of the Senators and Representatives to consult the people who are receiving the plunder from the pockets of the vast body of the yeomanny of this country. We are sent here to discharge a duty to the citizens and not to consult the beneficiaries as to how much we will allow them. The question for us to determine is how much and how little of the burden necessary to support an honest administration of the Government shall be laid upon the people of the United States. It is not to say to the beneficiary 'How much will you consent that we will let you take?"

the Government shall be laid upon the people of the United States. It is not to say to the beneficiary 'How much will you consent that we will let you take?' "We are told that the country is distressed and men out of work because 'Congress won't permit them to keep their hands in the pockets of the people and rob them." (Laughter.)

In answer to an interruption by Sentor Hawley, Senator Mills maintained that a reduction of the tariff on Democratic lines would not throw a single man out of work.

Senator Mills is no longer acting as a member of the Senator McPherson has resumed his place as a member of that committee.

Senator Mills in reply to a question

Senator Mills, in reply to a question concerning the matter, said: "Mr. Mc-Pherson has been a member of the committee all the time, and I have never been a member of it, I simply went on temporarily to represent him while he was sick and absent. Now he has come back and taken his place."

C'enn.) and Hepburn (Ia.), the four members who voted against the favorable report.

Congressman Quigg (Rep., N. Y.), in an address made to the Committee prior to its vote, took the position that the pending Dunphy bill, while professing to meet the objections urged in the President's message of vete, really skated over them. The President, Mr. Quigg said, insisted that the question of length of span must be left to the final determination of the Secretary of War, where the general law as to interstate bridges now leaves it.

Mr. Quigg said that the Dunphy bill left this subject to a commission of experts. He thought this was inviting a veto. He objected to the location at Seventieth street and thought Fifty-ninth street would be better.

Two amendments were made in Committee. One proposed by Representative Geary, of California, provides that the bridge shall sot be located below Fifty-ninth street, instead of below Sixty-sixth street, which was the limit proposed in the Dunphy bill. The other amendment by Representative Fletcher, of Minnesota, substitutes for "the chief engineer of the War Department."
